

The public debt was decreased nearly 10 million dollars during the month of April.

According to General Brady's theory, the two millions paid for "expediting" the star service was simply a lunch and not a full meal.

President Garfield is beginning to think that it is about time for the Senate to drop Mahone for a while, and pay some attention to the needs of the country.

Secretary Windom promises to manage the finances of the government with almost consummate ability. So far, his achievements astonish the brightest financiers in the country.

The public debt is $36 per capita. When the war closed, it was $78 per capita. In building cities, constructing railways, and in paying public debts, the Americans lead the world.

Mr. Tilden is coming to the front again. He has taken the first prize for a dog at the recent bench show in New York. We thought at the time that the Cincinnati Convention could not kill Tilden.

A brewer at Paterson, New Jersey, promised to marry a widow, but didn't. The widow brought suit and the jury gave her $8,337 damages. That jury figured the damages down to a fine point by putting in the $37.

The rush to Europe this season exceeds anything ever before seen in the line of travel to that part of the world. Every steamship is loaded with pleasure-seeking Americans, and many thousands will go later in the season.

Senator Cameron, of this State, was among the Senators who went to the President to induce him to withdraw the name of Robertson for the sake of harmony. The President did not care to do all the backing down, and therefore declined to withdraw the nomination.

General Brady has written a letter to the New York Tribune in which he sets forth his honesty in pretty strong terms. From his own stand-point Thomas J. Brady is a man of unflinching integrity notwithstanding the hundreds of thousands he gave away to the star contractors.

The "visible supply" of wheat is 1,293,000 bushels less than it was in May, 1880. But crops promise to be very good on the whole, so that there will not be a scarcity of wheat. The increased acreage will far more than make up the difference in the decrease of the visible supply.

Says the Madison Democrat: "The most prominent Republican candidates now for the office of governor at the next election, are Hon. Hans B. Warner, Hon. J. G. Thorp and Hon. Jonathan Bowman. Senators Ryland and Kelly, and ex-Senator Treat, are among the principal aspirants for lieutenant governor. The regency has not fully decided upon a ticket yet, and of course it all rests there. It is a matter of just no consequence at all, what these fellows want if the regency selects them, or any of them, they are all right; otherwise they cannot stop their futile efforts too soon." The Democrat need not borrow trouble about that "regency" and the candidates for Governor. That so-called regency has only an existence in the imagination of the editor of that paper. No regency has ever yet dictated a gubernatorial nomination for the Republicans in this State, and so long as the party keeps its sober senses and the people demand their rights, there will be no regency nominations.

It is a shameful exhibition of official plundering, to be sure, but when the Democratic organs claim that they made it an issue in the last campaign, they are barking up the wrong tree. The Madison Democrat claims that the Democratic papers used it, but that statement, to use a mild expression, is a "lecture too previous." It may be true that the frauds were partly discovered as long ago as in February, 1880, but will the Madison Democrat give its readers the names of the Democrats in Congress who brought these facts to the attention of the public as Postmaster-General James has done? The public understand generally, that so many Democrats, especially from the South, were interested in "expediting" the star service in the new States and Territories West of the Mississippi, that when the extravagance in General Brady's office became known, there was a general desire among the Democrats in Congress to say as little about the frauds as possible. It is but justice and truth to say that so far as the responsibility is concerned, one party in Congress is as deep in the mud as the other is in the mire.

THE STAR ROUTE FRAUDS.
WASHINGTON, May 2.—The postoffice department has nothing new to make public touching the star route contractors; but the investigation is being pushed fearlessly, without reference to who may be hurt. So far as the investigation of the contracts asked for in Senator Dorsey's letter is concerned, it can be stated that these and other contracts have been the subject of investigation for some time. It is said it is not the policy of the postmaster general to try the case in the newspapers. He will go ahead and gather all the evidence possible bearing on the supposed frauds, and when it is completed will turn it over to the attorney general for such action as he may see fit in the premises. Those, however, who imagine that General James is to be deterred from the performance of his duty by attacks made upon him publicly or privately do not know the man.

BAY STATE LIQUOR LAWS.
BOSTON, May 2.—Two new and important liquor laws went into effect to-day. One orders the removal of all screens and other obstructions from the windows of places where intoxicating liquors are sold, and forbids the exposure of bottles and other vessels containing or purporting to contain liquors. The other makes all club-rooms where liquors are sold without a license, common nuisances, and those who maintain them liable to the laws governing such cases. The former law is being circumvented in some cases by walling up half the front windows.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The quarterly report of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics for the three months ended Dec. 31st, 1880, has just been issued. This report embraces valuable information, showing the number and nationality of immigrants into the United States for twenty years, and a general statement in regard to the commerce of the various countries of South America, the United States, Great Britain, and France for SENATE PROCEEDINGS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 2.—The unfinished business was laid before the Senate.

Mr. Farley called attention to the large number of nominations awaiting action, and moved to go into executive sessions. The people of his State, of all parties, were appealing to the Senate to consider the important matters in which they were directly interested. Petitions were daily coming from California asking for the consideration of the Chinese treaties.

A debate ensued between Messrs. Dawes and Farley, the Chinese question receiving considerable attention.

Mr. Beck said the republicans had not dared to go into executive session, because of the division of the party on important nominations. He faulted the republicans with cowardice.

Mr. Sausbury denied the charge made by Mr. Dawes that Democratic senators were responsible for delay in transacting public business, and asserted the contrary to be the truth. After reference to Biddleberger and "that bargain" he said he was not sure the administration could have one-half its nominations confirmed except for the aid which it expected from Democrats; but if this thing is kept up, if the administration was to aid in strengthening the hands of repudiation in Southern States, he (Mr. Sausbury) would, for one, unhesitatingly state that the administration was not worthy his support.

The motion to go into executive session was lost—yeas 21, nays 22.

An hour was wasted upon dilatory motions, and the Senate adjourned.

MONETARY CONFERENCE NCE.

PARIS, May 2.—It is asserted German delegates to the monetary conference expressed the opinion that Germany cannot consent to coin unlimited silver, more particularly as long as England declines to do so, but she is prepared, provided France and America agree, to the unrestricted coinage of silver in proportion of 1 to 15½ and to impose certain restrictions upon herself in regard to the disposal of her stock of thalers, and eventually to provide room for the more extended use of silver in her own coin circulation.

Special negotiations are still proceeding with the object of securing the representation of England, and it is probable the conference at its next meeting will adjourn in order to give America and France time to gain precise information in regard to the views of England. Cernuschi and Horton, the sub-committee, will submit their proposals to the committee of fifteen to-morrow.

FOR TWENTY YEARS.
WASHINGTON, May 2.—The quarterly report of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics for the three months ended Dec. 31st, 1880, has just been issued. This report embraces valuable information, showing the number and nationality of immigrants into the United States for twenty years, and a general statement in regard to the commerce of the various countries of South America, the United States, Great Britain, and France for twenty years. From the immigration table it appears that the number of immigrants into the United States during the calendar year 1880, amounted to 593,703, being larger than during any previous year in the history of the country. Of the immigrants that arrived during the year 1880, 442,097 were from Europe, 7,098 were from Asia, 15 were from Africa, 142,225 were from the various countries of the American continent, 1,125 were from the Pacific Islands, and from countries not specified there were 1,143.

COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

EL PASO, Ill., May 5.—A cold-blooded murder was perpetrated here at 6:30 this evening. Walter Bullock, an old citizen of Woodford county, and for many years a resident of this place, was standing on West Front street, talking with a friend, when P. C. Ransom passed by. Bullock made a remark in regard to the late municipal election, in which Ransom was badly defeated for mayor. Ransom stopped and ordered Bullock to retract, and upon his refusal to do so, Ransom pulled out a revolver and shot Bullock three times, once through the head, then through the heart, and once in the shoulder. Bullock fell to the walk, gasped two or three times, and died. Ransom passed on down the street and stopped in front of the bank building until he was arrested a few moments later. An infuriated crowd soon gathered, and cries of "Lynch him!" were heard on all sides. He was taken to the calaboose, where a strong guard has been detailed to watch him until morning, when a coroner will arrive from Rome and a preliminary examination will be held.

THE PROGRAMME.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—It is the present intention to hold a caucus of Republican Senators in the morning. The committee of harmony, consisting of seven Senators, appointed by the Republican caucus, will make a report which is understood to be as follows:

1. That executive sessions be held.
2. That all nominations be referred to the appropriate committees.
3. That every nomination be acted upon unless opposed by one Republican Senator from the State where the office is to be filled.

BOOMING.

LA CROSSE, May 2.—The Mississippi river is rising at the rate of an inch an hour and is now over the tracks of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway on the levee, and is about 12 feet above zero. Merchants are moving out their goods from the basements along the river front. No damage has been done so far, but it is expected the water will reach a stage higher than last June, when much damage was done.

HEAVY BATTLE.

VIENNA, May 2.—Six thousand Albanians attacked three tabors of Turkish troops Saturday near Priesend. The Turks were hard pressed as Dervish Pasha arrived with four tabors of troops and totally defeated the Albanians. The combined losses were 1,800 killed and wounded.

AN APPEAL.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—In the state assembly this afternoon a resolution was introduced calling on the California senators to use every endeavor to break the deadlock in the United States senate, in order to obtain consideration of the Chinese treaties. Referred to the committee on federal relations, under the rules.

ARCHBISHOP PURCELL.

CINCINNATI, May 2.—The latest received from the Ursuline Convent of Brown county is that his Grace, the Most Rev. Archbishop Purcell, has been failing rapidly for some days past, and his physicians fear that the worst may be looked for in a few days.

A POSITION OF PERIL.

ALTON, Ill., May 2.—The river at this point is steadily rising, and the situation is hourly growing more serious. The height above low water mark at 1 P. M. to-day, as shown by government gauge, is twenty-seven feet nine inches, the rise in the twenty-four hours ending at the same hour being six inches.

WHAT A FALL.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 2.—Henry Thien, son of the founder of Thiensville, Wis., once accounted a wealthy man, but who lost his money in wheat speculation, was to-day arrested for the theft of a bag of flour he had sold to a baker.

Visible Improvements.

Mr. Noah Bates, Elmira, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I had an attack of bilious fever, and never fully recovered. My digestive organs were weakened and I would be completely prostrated for days. After using two bottles of your Burdock Blood Bitters the improvement was so visible that I was astonished. I can now, though 61 years of age, do a fair and reasonable day's work." Price $1.00, trial size 50 cents.

Side-shows in Queen Anne's Time.

We may smile at the following list of wild beasts on show, but we must recollect that it is not so very long since we were without zoological gardens, and the only wild animals to be seen were the lions, etc., in the Tower, the collection in Exeter Change, and the traveling menageries, which, indeed, are even now the only means by which the larger proportion of people in this country can have practical illustration of natural history. First let us take "The old she dromedary, lately arrived from Tartary, and her young one; they are headed like a horse, eye'd like an ox, nos'd like a deer, cloven-lip'd like a hare, also neck'd like a swan, tail'd like a mule, and cloven-footed like a cow." "The noble peccary which is very much admired by the learned. The noble Jack Call, the lion's provider, which hunts in the forest for the lion's prey. A small Egyptian panther spotted like a leopard. A strange monstrous creature, brought from the coast of Brazil, having a head like a child, legs and arms very wonderful, with a long tail like a serpent, wherewith he feeds himself as an elephant doth with his trunk." "Two wood monsters from the East Indies, male and female, being the admirablest creatures that ever was seen in the kingdom. Also, a little mammoth from the East Indies, which, by a great deal of pains, is now brought to that perfection that no creature of his kind ever performed the like; he exercises by the word of command; he dances the Cheshire Rounds; he also dances with two naked swords, and performs several other pretty fancies. Likewise a noble civet cat from Guinny, which is admired for its beauty and that incomparable scent which perfumes the whole place. Also a musk from Russia, being very wonderfully marked. Also a holiscop from Argier, being the beautifullest creature in all the world; speckled like a leopard." "A monkey is described as a wild hairy man from Bengal; it danced on a rope, drank a glass of ale, and 'smoked a pipe of tobacco as well as any Christian. This noble creature flings a strapader," etc. There was also a wonderful animal, the "man teger, lately brought from the East Indies, the like never seen before, being a great shock to his future subjects from the head downwards resembling a man, its fore parts clean and his hinder parts all hairy; having a long head of hair, and teeth two or three inches long; takes a glass of ale in his hand like a Christian, and drinks it." There was a leopard, "a beast of excellent beauty, presented to an English merchant in Turkey, by the King of the Arabs, as a particular mark of favor for eminent services performed, who for the maintenance of it in his voyage from Aleppo, gave 190 of the best and fattest fowls." —All the Year Round.

Alexander III.

Whether justly or not the present Emperor of Russia had the credit of being a very obstinate, capricious, and temperamental boy, and it was undoubtedly a great shock to his future subjects when the unexpected death of his elder brother placed him next to the throne. The present Emperor married the Princess Dagmar at the special request of his elder brother, to whom she was betrothed. The Czarina has four beautiful children—the eldest, Nicolas, a fine boy of twelve; the second, George, about nine, who bears a striking resemblance to the early pictures of Alexander II.; and two much younger ones, Konstantin and Michael. She has accompanied her husband to all parts of European Russia and has gained the affection of the people, particularly of the Poles. In the winter at the Anichkov Palace she has an annual Christmas tree; but it is not invariably the children of the nobles who are invited, but a number from the most squalid homes in St. Petersburg, recommended by some of the members of the society for the relief of distress; and these are always sent away with a good stock of warm clothing, as well as the customary presents.

Training Circus Elephants.

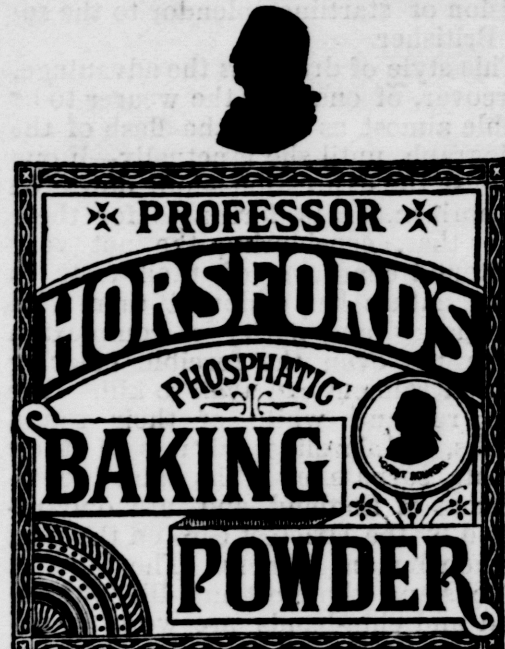

"How do you train elephants to do their funny business, standing on their heads and all that sort of thing?" A New Haven reporter queried. "Use the mechanic," explained Mr. Hutchinson. "We put a band about the hind legs of an elephant when we want to teach him to stand on his head. Then we put a pillow under his head. At the other end of the tackle is another elephant, and when the word of command is given off goes the elephant on the outside of the ring, and the fellow on the inside is obliged to stand on his head, whether he will or no. This is repeated until finally the beast knows what's wanted, and then at the word of command up he goes on his head. And it's so with all other tricks. It's persistence that does it." He explained that when once they had received instructions and were chained back to their places they would work at their tricks apparently trying to perfect themselves in them. It is, Mr. Hutchinson says, much more amusing to see them then than at any other time.

Hail.

From a study of phenomena of thunder-storms in the Gironde (France) M. Lespiau comes to the conclusion that, ceteris paribus, valleys are more struck by hail than hills or tableland. It seems that a certain depth below the clouds is necessary for the formation or the fall of hail to occur without obstacle. Further, the directions of the valleys traversed have a marked influence on the direction of the clouds, though they only cause a momentary deflection of the clouds, after following them a certain time, are carried on in the general direction of the vortical movement. For example, if a valley be in the axis of the zone of hail, or a little inclined to that axis, the hail clouds seem to be carried along that valley, as dead leaves are carried along by the wind in a trench. If the valley be subdivided by a mountain spur into two others, the hail cloud also divides and the two secondary valleys are ravaged in their turn, at least to the extent in which they are within the zone of hail. Valleys lying across this zone have also an influence, though less marked. When the clouds come to pass over them they show a tendency to descend and to spread out on the two sides of the zone, so that the zone is broader over valleys than over plateaus, and the ravages are often greater.

An Awful Scene.

I have the same old, old story to tell. My conduct has been such again—at any rate, that's what father says; and I've had to go up stairs with him, and I needn't explain what that means. It seems very hard, for I'd try to do my very best, and I'd heard Sue say: "That boy hasn't misbehaved for two days; good gracious I wonder what can be the matter with him." There's a fatal little about it, I'm sure. Poor father! I must give him an awful lot of trouble, and I know he'll get two new bamboo canes this winter just because I've done so wrong, though I never meant to do it.

It happened on account of coasting. We've got a magnificent hill. The road runs straight down the middle of it, and all you have to do is to keep on the road. There's a fence on one side, and if you run into it, something has got to break. John Kruger, who is a stupid sort of a fellow, ran into it last week head first, and smashed three pickets and everything he'd got was mercy he hit it with his head, or he might have broken some of his bones, and hurt himself. There isn't any fence on the other side, but if you run off the road on that side, you'll go down the side of a hill that's steeper than the roof of the Episcopal Church, and about a mile long, with a brook full of stones down at the bottom.

The other night Mr. Travers said—But I forgot to say that Mr. Martin is back again, and coming to our house worse than ever. He was there, and Mr. Travers and Sue, all sitting in the parlor, where I was behaving, and trying to make things pleasant, when Mr. Travers said, "It's a bright moonlight night let's all go out and coast." Sue said, "O that would be lovely Jimmy get your sled." I didn't encourage them, and I told father so, but he wouldn't admit that Mr. Travers or Sue or Mr. Martin or anybody could do anything wrong. What I said was, "I don't want to go coasting. It's cold and I don't feel very well, and I think we ought all to go to bed, so we can wake up real sweet and good-tempered." But Sue just said, "Don't you preach Jimmy if you're lazy just say so and Mr. Travers will take us out." Then Mr. Martin he must put in and say, "Perhaps the boys' afraid don't tease him he ought to be in bed anyway." Now I wasn't going to stand this, so I said, "Come on. I wanted to go all the time, but I thought it would be best for old people to stay at home, and that's why I didn't encourage them. I got out my double-ripper, and we all went out on the hill and started down.

I sat in front to steer, and Sue sat right behind me, and Mr. Travers sat behind her to hold her on, and Mr. Martin sat behind him. We went splendidly, only the dry snow flew so that I couldn't see anything, and that's why we got off the road and on to the side hill before I knew it.

The hill was just one glare of ice, and the minute we struck the ice the sled started away like a mad thing. I had just time to hear Mr. Martin say, "Boy mind what you're about or I'll get off," when she struck something—I don't know what—and everybody was pitched into the air, and began sliding on the ice without anything to help them, except me. I caught on a bare piece of rock, and stopped myself. I could see Sue sitting up straight, and sliding like a streak of lightning, and crying, "Jimmy help Charles Mr. Martin O my help me." Mr. Travers was on his stomach, about a rod behind her, and gaining a little on her, and Mr. Martin was on his back, coming down head first, and beating them both. All of a sudden he began to go to pieces. Part of him would slide off one way, and then another part would try to keep himself. I can tell you it was an awful and surreptitious sight. They all reached the bottom after a while, and when I saw they were not killed, I tried myself, and landed all right. Sue was sitting still, and mourning, and saying, "My goodness gracious I shall never be able to walk again. My comb is broken and that boy isn't fit to live." Mr. Travers wasn't hurt very much, and he fixed himself all right with some planks I gave him, and his handkerchief; and his overcoat looked as if he'd stolen it from a scare-crow. When he had comforted Sue a little (and I must say some people are perfectly sickening the way they go on), he and I collected Mr. Martin—all except his teeth—and helped put him together, only I got his cork-leg on my wing finger, and then we helped him home.

This was my father said that my conduct was such, and that his friend Martin didn't seem to be able to come into his house without being insulted and injured by me. I never insulted him. It isn't my fault if he can't slide down a hill without coming apart. However, I've had my last suffering on account of him. The next time he comes apart where I am, I shall not wait to be punished for it, but shall start straight for the North Pole, and if I discover that the British Government will pay me a million dollars, I'm able to sit down this morning, but my spirits are crushed, and I shall never enjoy life any more. —"Jimmy Brown," in Harper's Young People.

Goods for Spring Wear.

What is the reason silk is the only fabric in which a modern woman considers herself dressed? It is often stiff, awkward and difficult to manage; it is also often thin, glossy and unbecoming as glazed paper. Fine dark wool holds color and light and shade better; it has greater depth and softness; and some inexpensive cottons have a modesty, grace and freshness which may be credited to the weavers, and are wonderful cheap at the price. It is not long since a silk dress was a rare acquisition for the wives of comparatively rich men; now, every woman and every young girl must not only have a silk dress, but many who cannot afford it must have several, and have them frequently replaced, also, at any cost and any sacrifice—made by others; for the selfish and considerate are too apt to put the demand for the best long before they have learned the conditions of its being. At the present time there is not the least excuse for buying silk when it cannot be afforded, or when wool and cotton would do just as well. The cotton manufactures, for dress purposes, have been gradually improving for several years past, or rather, they have revived some of the styles that were known long ago, before silks became so common as to drive them for a time from the market. This spring they are daintier, prettier, more varied and more attractive than ever. The soft satins are fine as silk, and there is a new "cotton batiste," to which the name does great injustice, for it is not so silky as the linen batiste, and will not wear "stringy" as does the linen batiste, unless it is of the very highest grade, and then it is too costly for a majority. What is called cotton batiste is made like linen dress lawn. It is "cheer," as ladies say, without being diaphanous, and fine as well as firm. It comes in small, charming designs—some Old English, and some a modification of the Japanese. Some lovely patterns are in shaded blue, and others in very dull buff, with minute leaves and tiny brown berries in the delicate designs.

Last year the very large plaids had a vogue in consequence of the sudden development of the "handkerchief" dresses which the plaid gingham easily represented. Plaids of enormous size have also sold again this year, but the more recent patterns show stripes on varied clusters of lines, some fine as hairs and shaded from stripes that are almost solid to distinct alternates which form a very wide stripe of a different tone or color. The colors are gray, pink, blue and brown in different combinations, and there are also some that are very dark—wine, checked with old gold, bottle-blue and black; but these are moderate plaids—plain. Very new combinations are shown in wine-colored satine, and a satine with wine-colored ground well covered with a figure in shaded daffodils, the colors being different shades of old blue and gold. The short skirt trimmed with plaits or gathered flounces is of the plain color; the princess polonaise, partly open and draped away from the front, is of the figured fabric, and is finished with a deep round collar and cuffs of the plain satine, bordered with pale coffee-colored lace. Some of the fine cottons are dotted and have plain material to match the ground; others are in very small checks, and upon some of these latter the trimming material is dotted also. The new trimmings for the qualities can be selected to match fabrics and are equally fast in color. The colored cotton embroideries wash and wear with the goods and are of a uniform fineness of texture that corresponds exactly with the gingham and the pretty, soft-finished satines, percales and cambrics. The trimmings need not be drawn by its gathering thread into ruffling, but may be laid flat if preferred, and thus form a very pretty and durable embroidery. The Madeira embroidery is manufactured in colors also, but it cannot be used for the preservation of its color, and it is not of uniform quality, so that texture and pattern can rarely be found to suit a new and fine cotton fabric, and when it is, the price is exceptionally high.

The short dress is still in the ascendant, and it depends upon women themselves to keep it so, or at least so well sustained and protected that any woman can wear it without feeling herself remarkable. At present, the short dress, as before remarked, is in the ascendant. The majority of evening dresses of silk, satin and brocade worn by the girls are out short, and spring walking and visiting dresses of the richest material clear the ground so that they can be worn with comparative comfort. Unlike the mode of some ten or fifteen years ago, which ran into all sorts of eccentricities and made those who indulged in it look like mountebanks, the style of to-day is, or may be, modest, sensible and convenient. It is not too short, and it is most fashionable when it is simple and free from overloading. Can we not see that it is in its essentials? There ought to be women enough now of thought and intelligence to adhere to a single idea which is undeniably good—even essential to health, economy and cleanliness—and which offers no restriction except where restriction is necessary to save waste and the attributes becoming every conscientious woman. —Jennie June.

Keeping the Patient Quiet.

"He seems to be much worse to-day," said the doctor, as he contemplated the patient. "Did you keep him perfectly quiet, as I directed, nurse?" "Sakes a mass! of course I did," replied the nurse. "Goodness gracious! he hasn't moved all night." "Anything going on in the house to disturb him?" "My sakes, of course not. They had a little dancing party in the parlor, and a fight up-stairs, and some burglars got into the basement, and the servant girl set fire to her bed, and the fat boarder fell down the second flight, and the man in the next room licked his wife, and the water-pipe busted on the floor below, and the gentleman in the back parlor gave a little supper, and there was some music in the third story, and the cats got out upon the back fence, and the little girl up the third pair died in the night, but he never moved. Bless your heart, he was the quietest man you ever saw!" "Quite right; quite right; did you give him the pills?" "My gracious! I forgot the pills, but I gave him all the powders, eight sedative powders, four Dover powders, and all the quinine powders and the mixtures, three of 'em, and all but the pills." "Just so. Did you change the bandages on his head?" "It wasn't any use. He wouldn't keep 'em on. You never saw anything like him. I put four pillows on his head, and he kept still as mice after that." "I see. Was he delirious during the night?" "Oh! wasn't he? but he hasn't hollered much for two hours. He's been pretty quiet since he fell out of bed. Before that he was restless." "Of course, naturally. Any of his friends been to see him?" "There were ten or a dozen here all night, playing cards and enjoying themselves. But he paid no attention to them." "I suppose not. Hasn't asked for anything, has he?" "Not for a long time. He's doing well, isn't he, doctor?" "Yes, yes, as well as could be expected. As near as I can judge, he has been dead about twelve hours. You needn't continue the medicines. Just keep him quiet, and don't let anybody talk to him. What he wants now is rest."

And the doctor certified to the reliability of the nurse, and departed.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—A pretty servant girl in a Rochester (N. Y.) boarding-house won the ardent love of two boarders. Both desired to marry her. She was puzzled to choose between them, and further complicated the affair by accepting first one and then the other. The rivals at length agreed to meet her in a room together and get her final decision. When the momentous occasion came one tried to influence her by drawing a knife and declaring that he would not survive a refusal. The other, not to be outdone, placed a pistol at his head and swore that he would blow his brains out in case of disappointment. She took the dagger man, however, and the pistol man allowed himself to be disarmed, though he vows he will do it on her wedding day.
